GameChange Solar, a manufacturer of fixed-tilt and tracker solar racking systems, has been awarded an order for 100 MW of its Max-Span post-driven racking systems. Although the company did not disclose the name of the customer or of the project, GameChange says it secured the order from “a leading worldwide solar developer” and the project will be installed on the U.S. East Coast starting later this year.

“The value pricing of our product helped to make this project feasible given tight economic requirements,” said Derick Botha, vice president of business development at GameChange Solar. “The scale of manufacturing that GameChange possesses as well as the ability of meeting the required delivery timelines for a quality product were also keys that allowed GameChange to win this significant order.”
